“ I have been trying to recall past memories of you and seeing what stands out...when mom and dad were talking about handling your personal effects I told mom I really would like to pick out a Hoodia or sweatshirt of yours, just one, something comfy. Only just now I am remembering a couple times....one time you picked me up so I could clean and organize your apartment and all your clothes and you were gonna pay me 10 bucks an hour to do it. After I was done and you were gonna take me back home but wanted me to roll around with you so we could hang out a little bit longer. It was pretty warm when I left but it was late and I was cold I kept turning the heat on you had to insist maybe 3 times for me to wear you jacket til I finally did...and the other time wasn't even that long ago maybe 2019 I was dressed for summer and it started raining super bad right when I got to ur house and was gonna take ur dog out for a walk. Again you had to insist a few times before I said yeah ok I probably should just wear one of you jackets so you gave me a brand new pair of sweatpants and a matching hoodie they were both warm and I was glad to have them....I let someone wear the sweater never to return but I'm still wearing the sweatpants rn

“ I have a memory I want to share. I've laughed at this over the years. Not sure if aunt Linda and uncle John were over for a visit or if mom was babysitting John that day but him and I got in a fight, we were rolling down the side hill in my parents yard fighting haha we even had an audience outside the fence. Why did we fight? I have no idea but I just laugh when I think of that.

“ My heart aches for my sweet aunt Linda and uncle John. John John may you rest peacefully. You and Jason I'm sure are up there stirring things up a bit. My condolence gos out to your kids and your brother and sister as well. You will be missed my cousin. Love always Tammie

P.s please tell grandma I've been wanting her recipe for lasagne my whole adult life. And if she can let me know it somehow it would be amazing.
